Jewett Motors, a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company, was organized in December, 1921 and lasted until 1926.

It was named for the parent company's president, Harry M. Jewett.

The car was marketed as a Jewett "Six", a companion to the Paige, the primary product of Paige-Detroit.

At the end of the first 17 months of production, 40,000 vehicles had been sold.

Hydraulic four-wheel brakes were added in 1926.

After production of over 100,000 Jewetts, the company was purchased by the Graham Brothers in 1927 for $4 million. The Jewett became just another model of the Paige for that year only. It was then renamed as a Graham-Paige for 1928 only.
